The Barringer Rear Rifle Sight

The Inventor of This Improved Sight is Mr. D. M. Barringer, A Member and one of The Board of Directors of The Penna. State Rifle Association.

CONSTRUCTION.—This sight, as shown in the following diagrams, consists of a cube or block, in the rear face of which is an opening or cavity in the form of a cone, the apex of which opens into and through the front face of the block which is countersunk.* A notch of about eighty degrees is cut into the top of the block and opens into the conical cavity and the peep-hole in the front face. This notch runs longitudinally with the barrel of the gun, and its sides, if produced, would intersect the axis of the conical cavity.

Two light-colored metallic rings are inserted upon the surface of the conical cavity. These, like the peep-hole, have their centres on the axis of the conical cavity. These circles divide the distance between the peep-hole and the outer or rear margin of the conical cavity into three equal parts.

View in Perspective

FEATURES.—In looking into and through this form of sight, the eye is naturally impelled to look into it squarely, that is exactly along the line of the axis of the conical cavity. Any deviation from this is unconsciously recognized, because one side of the cavity then appears shorter than the other. The concentric rings intensify this effect, as, unless the eye looks along the axis of the cone, the rings do not appear concentric but appear elliptical and closer together on one side than on the other.

The result is that the eye involuntarily seeks and finds the line of the axis of the cone, which thus becomes the line of the sharpest vision. The sight, moreover, should be so adjusted that the axis of the cone, when produced, intersects the bead sight. Therefore, to the one looking squarely into the cone, the bead sight instantly appears in the centre of the peep-hole, and the marksman is not obliged to grope for it.

The effect of the combination of rings and the outer or rear margin of the cone also facilitates keeping the bead sight in the exact centre of the peep-hole, as well as upon the object aimed at, even though this peep-hole be much larger than the aperture of peep sights now commonly in use. This gives a larger field of vision, the advantage of which is so well recognized by sportsmen and is exemplified in the Lyman sight.

The advantage of the notch opening into the conical cavity and peep-hole is obvious, since it facilitates the finding of the objective point of aim and placing the front or bead sight upon it. It is also of extreme importance in allowing the light from above to fall into and illuminate the conical cavity. It is this feature and also the fact that it is capable of being fixed immovably upon the rifle barrel at the place usually occupied by other rear sights that constitute its great advantages over the Lyman or any other known sight embodying some of the same optical features.

The universal opinion of all riflemen who have practically tested this sight on game is that the facility with which a quick and accurate aim is caught and retained is unequalled in any other form of rifle sight.

This is due to the fact that in all other known sights no attempt is made to guide the eye to the proper point. This sight, however, does naturally guide the eye along the axis of the cone and through the centre of the peep-hole to the bead.

* That is, another small conical cavity is bored out of the front of the block and the two meet at their apices. This serves the double Purpose of protecting the knife edge from injury and making it very easy to get rid of snow, water or any small object which has lodged in the sight by blowing directly down upon the knife edge from above. The obstruction then readily finds its way out of one cone or the other. This is a very important advantage which will be most appreciated when put to the test.

The result is, that the three processes necessary in the usual styles of rear sight, first, of groping for the front or bead sight; second, the placing of this in the bottom of the "V" shaped notch of the rear sight, and third, making the alignment between these two and the desired point on the target, are practically reduced to one operation. That is to say, all that is required of the marksman is to place the front or bead sight upon the object at which he is aiming and to pull the trigger; since for the reasons above recited he is naturally impelled to see or to place the front sight in the centre of the peep-hole of the rear sight as soon as he looks into and through the latter. Nine out of ten will involuntarily do the right thing when shooting at living or other objects, and do it instantly.

THE INVENTOR CLAIMS FOR THIS SIGHT THE FOLLOWING MERITS

First.—It combines all of the advantages possessed by both the open and peep sights.

Second.—It is contended that it enables the marksman to catch an accurate aim more quickly and to retain it better than any other style of sight now in use.

Third.—The edge of the peep-hole is thoroughly protected and the sight is stronger and more durable than any other style of rear sight.

Fourth.—Snow, water, or any small obstruction can be easily removed by blowing sharply down upon the sight, which usually causes the obstruction to instantly disappear out of one cone or the other.

Fifth.—It is adapted to all kinds of light and is especially good in a dim or uncertain light.

Sixth.—The troublesome blurring or lack of definition in all other styles of sight is entirely overcome. By subjecting the sight to the action of the sandblast before it is blued, the objectionable reflection of light from any portion of the sight is prevented.

Seventh.—The object aimed at is seen much more clearly because the marksman is enabled to see it all around the front sight, intead of having the major portion of the object obscured by the rear sight.

RIGHT WAY

Rear View of Sight, showing appearance of Front or Bead Sight through Rear Sight when aiming. Barrel in Section

WRONG WAY

When aiming, the Front Sight should be seen through the Rear Sight in the manner shown in Fig. 4. and not this way.

Eighth.—It prevents, to a very great degree, if not entirely, the tendency to see too much of the front sight. This, as is well known, is a very common cause of inaccuracy and of overshooting in other styles of open sights, especially when taking quick aim at game.

Ninth.—Owing to the rings and to the general shape it is especially suitable for beginners and poor shots, since they are naturally impelled, even when not knowing what is required of them, to place the bead in the proper place, namely, the exact centre of the peep-hole.

Tenth.—Owing to the large aperture at the end of the cone, it is well adapted to those who do not possess very keen vision, or whose eyes have begun to fail.

Eleventh.—By an ingenious device it can be raised or lowered to suit different rifles, or the desire of the rifleman, without in the least impairing its strength.

Twelfth.—It is far superior to any other rear sight in that the knife edge is not only protected but is usually shaded, and its novel shape prevents any tendency to shoot to the right or left according to the position of the sun, so noticeable in all styles employing the "V" shaped notch.

N. B.—If possible each rifleman, before attaching this sight to his rifle, should move it along the barrel back and forth until he has found the place where it suits his eye best—that is where he can most clearly see the bead of the front sight when looking through it. When this place is found the sight should be placed there and screwed down or otherwise securely fastened to the barrel, so that it can not afterward be moved to the right or left. The front sight should be fixed in the same way. This is a "wrinkle" well known to old sportsmen who also, as a rule, care nothing for wind gauges, elevating devices, etc., as liable to cause them to miss more game than they kill by their use. With modern rifles especially there is little or no need for elevating devices, except among sharpshooters, and it must not be forgotten that nearly all game is killed at short ranges, say under 200 yards, at which distance the trajectory of the best modern rifles is practically flat and no elevation of the rear sight is required. If, however, it is desired to have a rear elevating sight also for use at extreme ranges this can be gratified by placing a Lyman sight on the small of the stock, which should be left folded down except when needed for very long distance work. It can then be raised and it will be found that the Barringer sight on the barrel in no way interferes with its use.

FRONT SIGHT.—A round bead sight, like for instance the round ivory tipped Lyman bead sight, should always be used as a front sight instead of the common knife blade front sight, since the round bead is in sympathy with the round peep-hole at the apex of the cone. This will be seen at once upon referring to the diagram showing the front sight as seen through the rear sight when aiming.

The First Brigade is again raiding the Third for men who can shoot. Last year they induced Gamble, of the Eighth, to go to Philadelphia, and he is now shooting on the First Regiment team. It is reported that the First Regiment is now trying to get Dunn, also of the Eighth, to enlist in their regiment when his term expires in the Eighth this year. It is said that Gamble does not attend drill and no duty of any kind is required of him, and it is also said that the proposition made Dunn is even worse since it allows Dunn to reside in Harrisburg and continue in his present employment, doing no military duty except with the rifle team. It is also said that Ziegler of the Eighth has been approached by a Philadelphia regiment. It is time the First Brigade regiments developed their own shots and ceased keeping up their teams by raiding others and making their teams practically professionals.

It is time that the order governing the state matches required a certificate that the members of the various teams have done 75 per cent. of all military duty during the year and reside within the territorial limits of the regiment they represent.

Another Argument in Favor of Canteen in U. S. Army and Navy.

Egypt's Trial of the Army Canteen has Materially Benefited the British Soldiery there Both in Morals and Health.

Cairo, Dec. 24.—Perhaps those who refuse to accept the testimony of the loyal and conscientious officers and soldiers of our own army regarding the benefits of the canteen may be willing to accept the evidence of Lord Cromer concerning the operation of the plan in Egypt and its effect upon the morals and habits of the soldiers. In his latest report to the Government in London, he says:

An experiment under somewhat novel conditions has recently been tried in Cairo, with the two-fold object of enlivening the ordinary life of the British soldiers in garrison and of providing an antidote against drunkenness. Without going into the details of the rules, I may say that practically every one wearing the King's uniform may make use of the club without paying any subscription. An officer is president and the finances are placed under the supervision of a committee of officers, but the detailed management is entirely in the hands of the men themselves. They are responsible for the good behaviour of the members. I should add that alcoholic drinks are supplied in moderation.

The soldiers belonging to the Cairo garrison have amply justified the confidence reposed in them. The average daily attendance is over 200. About 100 meals are served daily. I am informed that since the creation of the club there has been a reduction of no less than thirty-three per cent. in cases of drunkenness among the garrison.

Previous to the creation of the club, the soldier, when once outside the barracks, was forced to go for amusement or refreshment to one of the numerous bars which abound in the town, where he was often supplied with poisonous liquor and exposed to temptations of various kinds. My main object, however, in giving publicity to the facts, is that it seems to me possible that, even in other garrison towns where the special circumstances which prevail in Cairo do not exist, or exist in a less degree, it may be found expedient to try a somewhat similar experiment.

MATTERS are somewhat quiescent in the campaign for the colonelcy of the Second Infantry to fill the vacancy which will be caused by the retirement of Colonel Dechert, on April 21. So far there appears to be no agreement among the officers upon whom they will support for the position. There have been several men named and each has a few partisans, but no one, so far, seems to be a favorite. There was considerable talk to the effect that Colonel Coryell, of the Sixth Infantry, could be induced to transfer his allegiance to the Second, and it was said that the colonel was in a receptive mood. Nothing much has been heard from the advocates of Colonel Coryell, in the past few weeks, and some officers of the Second say that another man will be agreed upon.

The colonelcy of such a regiment as the Second Infantry should not go begging. Here is an organization with a fine armory, located in a most desirable portion of the city, which under the administration of an able commander would rapidly forge to the front. Good colonels are, it is true, somewhat scarce, but the material for the making of first-class regimental commanders is plentiful, and it only requires discernment, with wisdom, on the part of the officers of the regiment to make a proper selection.

THE spring inspections in the National Guard of Pennsylvania are now under way and the companies of the three brigades are humping themselves to make records. In the First Brigade the inspection of several companies of the Second Infantry was made by Colonel Frank G. Sweeney, Inspector General, owing to the illness of Major Charles H. Worman, Brigade Inspector, who was stricken on the morning of the day when the inspections were scheduled to begin. Colonel Sweeney was at once notified and promptly jumped in and took up the work. Major Worman, we are glad to note, has now recovered from his illness and resumed active duty.

THE General Court Martial convened to try Captain A. H. B. Jeffords, Inspector of Rifle Practice, Third Infantry, upon charges preferred by Captain George W. Boyer, of Company A, of that regiment, based upon a personal altercation between the two officers at the Sea Girt Rifle Range and in the regimental armory, has, so far, failed to produce any results, and it looks as if the whole affair will be dropped.

The wisdom of permitting such a small matter to be dignified by the ordering of a G. C. M. is open to question. It would have been far better for all concerned, and especially for the fair fame of the regiment if the affair had been squelched in its incipiency. The alleged offense was surely not of a sufficiently serious character to preclude a quiet settlement through judicious handling by the authorities.

As it has happened the entire proceedings seem to have been attempted without careful observance of the regulations governing the convening of military courts of justice. The several attempts to go on with the trial have been met with snags in the way of technicalities. The court has assembled upon several occasions but the defects in the manner of procedure were such as to bar all attempts to go to trial.

NOTES

BATTERY "B"

J. T. Rogers, Drum Major of the Eighteenth Regiment, has been transferred from that command to that of Battery B, with which he served during the Spanish-American War.

Harry B. Burns, First Lieutenant and Assistant Surgeon of Battery B, has been elected a member of Select Council of the city of Pittsburg.

Charles C. Williams, Battery B's newly elected Second Lieutenant, is a physician and formerly served as Hospital Steward after the Battery's reorganization into the State Guard.

H. P. Yetter, of Battery B, formerly Second Lieutenant of the Second United States Engineers, has just returned from Santiago de Cuba Province, Cuba, where he served under the aforesaid command. He reports the country as making great strides under the present administration, and the outlook for the future as brilliant. Captain J. P. Lindsay, formerly of the Eighteenth Regiment, N. G. P., accompanied him on the trip.

The members of Battery B give an informal dance the first Monday of each month.

There should be no reason for the members of Battery B getting on the sick list, as there are two physicians and surgeons and one druggist holding commissions from the State as officers of that command.

SHERIDAN TROOP

The Sheridan Troop (Captain C. S. W. Jones commanding) on Tuesday evening, February 23d, entertained and dined its honorary members at the Armory.

The principal feature of the menu was roast young goat. The goat first entered into the fun of the troop in the Anthracite Coal Regions in 1902 and it became a feature in the menu of the organization this winter.

Among the invited guests were Hon. J. W. Howe, Lieutenant H. S. Fleck, Councilman John H. Grazier, Hon. Richard Beaston, C. O. Templeton, Esq., D. S. Kloss, Cashier of the First National Bank, and Colonel W. Fred Reynolds, Ordnance Officer of the Second Brigade. Colonel Reynolds' address on Rifle Practice seemed to interest the Troopers very much.

The Sheridan Band, of Tyrone, rendered some fine musical selections.

NINTH REGIMENT

Captain Frank Dietrick, Company A, of the Ninth Infantry, owing to removal to Philadelphia, has tendered his resignation. Captain Dietrick commanded one of the best companies in the Guard and last year stood at the head of the Regiment. It is confidently expected that pressure will be brought to bear to have him enter one of the Philadelphia Regiments, possible Colonel Coryell's command.

Colonel C. Bow Dougherty is a relative of Brigadier General Dougherty, formerly Colonel of the Eighth U. S. Infantry, of which Captain Kennedy, the United States Inspecting Officer, is Adjutant. Colonel Dougherty has invited Captain Kennedy to stop at his home as his guest during the inspection of the Wilkes-Barre companies.

Captain E. D. Camp, Company D, of the Ninth Infantry, is an untiring worker in the Guard and very popular with his men. His commission will shortly expire.

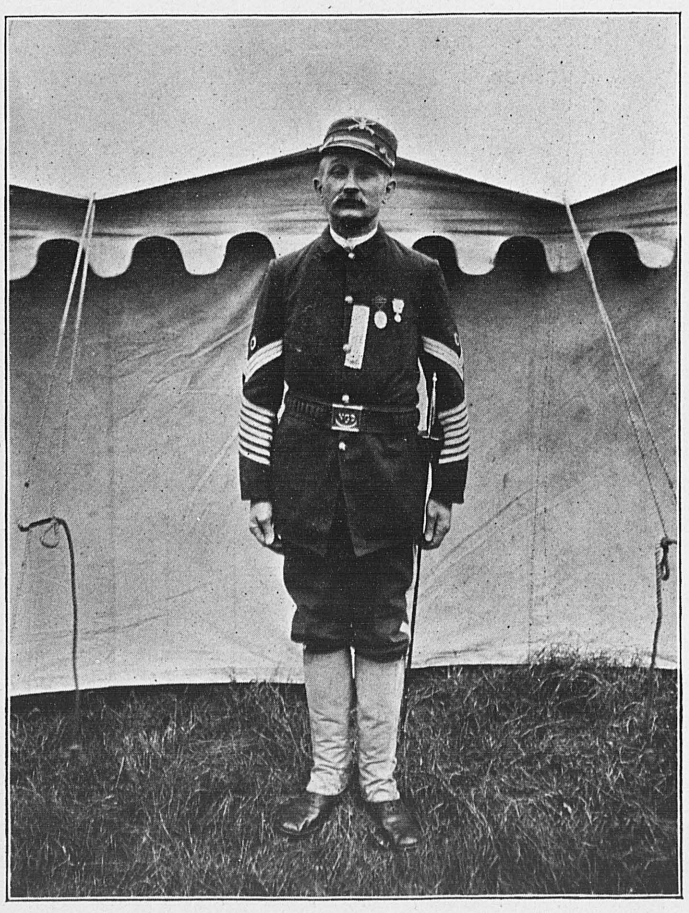
At a recent meeting the company, in a very feeling manner, tendered the Captain a unanimous vote for re-election. Captain Camp was called upon to make a few remarks during the session, but was so overcome with emotion that he could only thank the men for their appreciation and confidence imposed in him as their company commander.

The agitation of taking the Guard to the St. Louis Exposition by several prominent officers, seems to have awakened renewed interest throughout the State. This is especially noticeable in many companies of the First and Third Brigades, who are rapidly recruiting to their full strength and of an exceptional personnel.

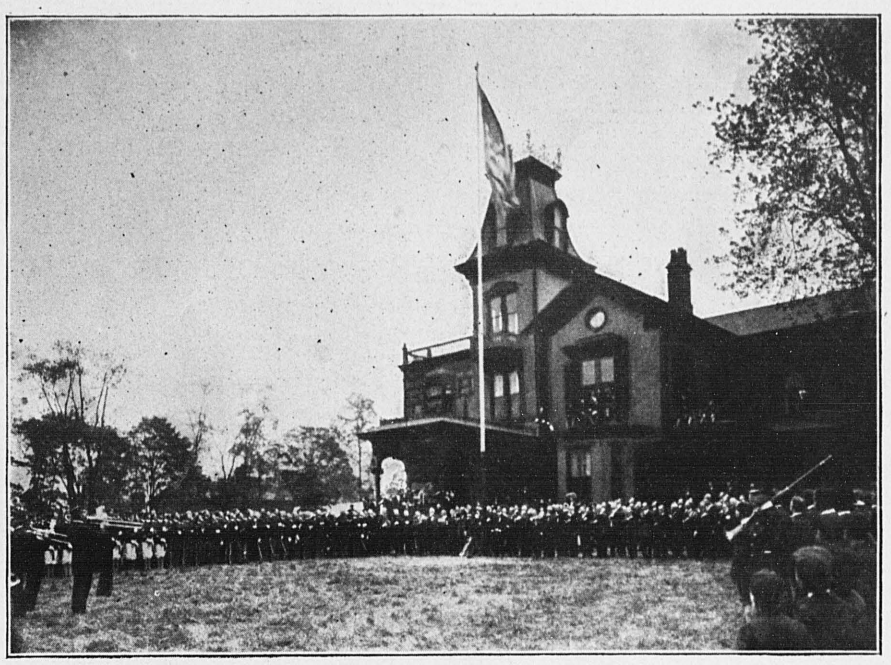
While a little premature to say what the outcome of the matter will be, the boom at least has done a considerable amount of good.

THIRTEENTH REGIMENT

Colonel Louis A. Watres has recently been elected president of a stock company which purchased the Scranton Truth. It is expected that this paper in the future will be a Republican publication.



Sergeant Joseph F. Ruettger, oldest Color-Sergeant in the Guard.



Flag Raising at Col. Rutledge's Headquarter's, 18th Infantry
(Star Spangled Banner)

The Field, Staff and Non-Commissioned Staff and Company C (Captain Murphy), of the Thirteenth Infantry, were inspected on Tuesday evening, February 23d, by the Third Brigade Inspector, Major William P. Clarke, accompanied by Captain Kennedy, of the Eighth Infantry, U. S. A.

This was the beginning of the inspection season in Colonel Watres's command, and from the marked improvement of Company C over last year it would be safe to predict that the Regiment will be one of the leaders in the State this year.

The movements of Company C were executed with considerable snap and, with the exception of a few minor errors, the inspection was first class.

The inspection of the officers was a trifle marred by the Non-Commissioned Staff attempting to go through the Manual of the Sabre the same as the officers.

In the absence of Colonel Watres, who is on leave with permission to go beyond the seas, the regiment is in command of Lieutenant Colonel Stillwell.

In the case of Company H, of the Thirteenth, which is without a captain, it is strongly intimated that Major William S. Millar, formerly Inspector of the Third Brigade, has been tendered the position and pledged a unanimous vote. Major Millar has the matter of re-entering his old command under advisement. He has fully recovered from his illness of last year and is anxious to get into the harness again.

He is very much devoted to his brigade commander and the service in general and we hope to greet the doughty Major in active service before long.

The inspection of Company A (Captain Conrad) on Thursday evening, February 25th, was almost faultless. On this occasion Colonel Dougherty and several members of his staff visited the armory and highly praised the work of Company A. Captain Conrad has been an indefatigable worker and from a state of chaos has made a first class company.

He, however, laments the loss of considerable State property, which has been systematically spirited away from the lockers. This is likewise the case in Company B and one or two other companies. Thefts of this kind are not infrequent in the Guard, and a strong effort should be made to locate the perpetrators and bring them to justice.

Captain B. W. Bevans, who owing to pressure of business several years ago retired from the Regiment, is again spoken of as a commissioned officer in the Scranton City Guard. Captain Bevans first entered the Regiment in 1890 and has gone through the various grades from musician to company commander. His re-entry would prove a valuable acquisition to the command.

It is stated that Major William W. Inglis, Ordnance Officer of the Third Brigade, has tendered his resignation owing to increased business responsibilities, he being General Superintendent of the Temple Coal Company. Major Inglis is a graduate of the Thirteenth Infantry.

It is strongly hinted that the position about to be vacated by Major Inglis may be offered Major Millar.

SECOND TROOP

"A Trooper's Narrative of Service in the Anthracite Coal Strike, 1902," by Trooper Stewart Culin, Second Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, and published by George W. Jacobs & Co., is a very interesting publication.

The introduction by Thomas Allen Glenn, honorary member of the Second Troop, contains a brief history of the organization.

The author of the "Trooper's Narrative" gives a very vivid description of a soldier's life during the industrial disturbances.

Trooper Culin was a keen observer and in compiling the narrative has tried to please the members of the Guard.

The book is on sale at George W. Jacobs & Co., 1216 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., and the price is one ($1.00) dollar.

The Second Troop has been drilling with foil and mask all winter, the work being obligatory. A fencing team will be entered this Spring in local contests and later on in contests with military teams elsewhere. The work with foils this winter is preparatory to broadsword and sabre fencing, which will be the next year's work.

FIRST REGIMENT

The activity of the officers of the First Regiment during the temporary absence of their Colonel in Florida was remarkable, as was evident by their providing an entire new dress equipment for the famous band and field music, comprising over one hundred professional musicians. It is expected that this organization will make quite a stunning appearance on April 19th, which is the anniversary of the First Foot.

The Washington Grays (Company "G," commanded by Captain George B. Zane) held a military and athletic carnival on Saturday evening, February 20th, which was largely attended and proved a most enjoyable and successful affair.

FOURTH REGIMENT

In General Orders No. 1, Headquarters of the Fourth Infantry, the several companies of this regiment will be inspected in their respective armories in the following order:

Company F—Pottsville, Monday, April 11, 1904, 8 P. M.
Company G—Pine Grove, Tuesday, April 12, 1904, 8 P. M.
Company H—Lebanon, Wednesday, April 13, 1904, 8 P. M.
Company E—Hamburg, Thursday, April 14, 1904, 8 P. M.
Company C—Columbia, Friday, April 15, 1904, 8 P. M.
Company K—Lancaster, Saturday, April 16, 1904, 8 P. M.
Company D—Allentown, Tuesday, April 19, 1904, 8 P. M.
Company B—Allentown, Wednesday, April 20, 1904, 8 P. M.
Company I—Reading, Thursday, April 21, 1904, 8 P. M.
Company A—Reading, Friday, April 22, 1904, 8 P. M.

Regimental Band, at Armory Company K, Lancaster, Saturday, April 16, 1904, 7.30 P. M.

Hospital Corps, at Armory, Allentown, Tuesday, April 19, 1904, 7.30 P. M.

Colonel O'Neill is determined that his command shall secure a high rating for this season's work and they are justly entitled to be placed among the leaders of the State.

Company B, of the Fourth Regiment, will appear at the inspection in the new dress cap, which will be one of the few commands wearing the new headgear at the Spring inspections.

This company has also decided to hold a grand military ball at their armory on Monday, April 4th, when it is expected that many military men from adjacent organizations will attend.

The field and staff officers and non-commissioned staff of the Fourth Infantry, located in Allentown with Companies B and D, attended a patriotic service in Salem Reformed Church on Sunday evening, February 21st, commemorative of Washington's Birthday. The detachment appeared in dress uniform with great coats and presented a very neat appearance.

The Hon. Robert E. Wright, who is very much interested in the Fourth Regiment and the local veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, was to deliver the oration, but unfortunately was taken ill, and in the absence of Mr. Wright the address was delivered by Mr. Rupp.

Nearly three thousand persons attended the patriotic service in memory of Washington's birth.

Mention has been made recently that Company F, Fourth Infantry, desired a transfer to the Eighth Infantry. It has, however, been authoritatively stated that such a change would not be made for the present at least.

The situation with Company I, of the Thirteenth, seeking a transfer to the Fourth is an entirely different proposition. The location is too far from the headquarters of the Thirteenth Infantry and the officers claim that it frequently puts them to great inconvenience and personal expense in attending meetings, schools, etc., at Scranton, when better results could be accomplished by their being attached to the Allentown headquarters.

SECOND REGIMENT

The inspections so far in the Second Regiment have proven very satisfactory. Colonel Sweeney particularly speaks of the great improvement shown in this command over last year. He was also pleased with the interrogatories of the officers and non-commissioned officers.

Colonel Edward Morrell has been a visitor to the Second Regiment Armory and closely scrutinized the inspection.

None of the Western members of the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief participated in the Washington's Birthday celebration at the Academy of Music. Among the members of the Governor's Staff present were: General Thomas J. Stewart, Inspector General Frank G. Sweeney, Judge Advocate General Edward Morrell, Assistant Quartermaster General Thomas Potter, Jr., Assistant Commissary General Horace L. Haldeman, Colonel Daniel B. Shepp, Colonel Paul S. Reeves, Colonel George Brooke, Jr., Colonel Walter T. Bradley.

NOTES.

Colonel John Seiser Muckle, formerly Aide-de-Camp on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief, is preparing a paper on signal service which he will read before a convention in one of the nearby States.

Colonel Thomas Allen Glenn, Aide-de-Camp on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief, has a sixty-day leave of absence with permission to go beyond the seas. He will visit the leading cities in Europe and make a special report to the Adjutant General, noting the Militia system abroad.

Announcement has just been made of the marriage of Major Waldo W. Hull, surgeon of the Twelfth Regiment, N. G. P., Williamsport, Pa., and Miss Mabel F. Swartz, of Renovo, Pa., which took place at Elmira, N. Y., October 23, 1903. They will be at home at 626 West Third street, Williamsport, after May 1.

Captain C. W. Kennedy, Adjutant Eighth United States Infantry, has been detailed by the Commanding General Atlantic Division, to inspect the Third Brigade, N. G. P. His instructions contemplate that his inspections shall be made at the same time and places as those of the Brigade Inspector. He will, therefore, accompany Major Clarke upon the inspection of that Brigade, which began at Carlisle, February 10.

Major William W. Inglis, for the past three years Ordnance Officer of the Third Brigade, has resigned. General Gobin has appointed Capt. Frank G. Darte, Commissary of the Ninth Regiment, Ordnance Officer to succeed Major Inglis. Major Darte was the Ninth Regiment's best shot and is well equipped for the new position he assumes. He has been on all of the recent Brigade teams and State teams.

Report of Major William W. Inglis, Ordnance Officer, Third Brigade, N. G. P., for 1903.

Dr. M. D. Youngman, in a well-written article in "The Suburbanite," gives some special facts as regards Atlantic City, as will be seen by the following extracts:

"A gifted speaker, responding to a toast last spring, said: 'Ten years ago Atlantic City was a suburb of Philadelphia; five years ago it was a suburb of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Pittsburg; to-day it has become the suburb of the United States.'"

"Atlantic City has steadily advanced as a winter resort. Here you will find the dwellers of the big cities who come down and rent a furnished cottage. At the hotels you will find many more, spending the winter out of doors, away from the rigors of their inland home. After the holidays come the wearied leaders of fashion—just resting, eating regularly and getting ample sleep."

"The air of Atlantic City is peculiarly dry and bracing, and epidemics are unknown. The grip is absolutely unknown, and if the poison is brought here it is soon blown away and victims of the grip and its sequelæ recover with astonishing rapidity, and so pronounced is the effect of the air that the influx of these sufferers alone is considerable."

The one point Dr. Youngman missed was that to reach Atlantic City speedily, comfortably and absolutely safely, you should travel by the Reading System's Express Trains, leaving Chestnut Street and South Street Ferries, Philadelphia, at frequent suitable intervals. Fast, well-equipped trains also run between Liberty Street Ferry, New York, and Atlantic City.

New modern Pullman Sleeping Cars have been placed in operation by the Philadelphia & Reading Railway between Philadelphia and Williamsport on trains leaving Reading Terminal at 11.30 P. M. daily and on train leaving Williamsport at 11.30 P. M. daily. The new cars are in every way modern and up-to-date.

Capt. James W. Umbenhauer, commanding Company "G," Fourth Regiment, located at Pine Grove, has forwarded his resignation and insists upon its acceptance, because of the condition of his health, which, he says, is such as to prevent his giving the company the attention it should have. Captain Umbenhauer was the senior captain in the Third Brigade and the fourth in the Division. He enlisted in Company H, Eighth Regiment, now Company "G," Fourth Regiment, January 9, 1877. He was appointed successively corporal, sergeant and first sergeant. He was elected second lieutenant November 25, 1886, and first lieutenant April 28, 1887. He became captain of the company April 17, 1891, and was re-elected in 1896 and 1901. Although located in probably the smallest town represented in the Division, his company has always been known as one of the best in the State for field service, and it has for years been a wonder how so good a company could be maintained with such poor facilities.

The National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice met in Washington, D. C., January 18, and took action upon a number of matters of importance. Probably the most important was to change the conditions of the National Match by adding a skirmish run. This gives the Army teams a great advantage, in that their members give undivided attention to soldiering while the Guardsman has other business to attend to. In addition to this the Army man is given every facility for all kinds of practice, while the Guardsman in a majority of the instances has no facilities for skirmish.

Fort Riley, Chicago and Creedmoor were urged for the place of holding the next National Match. Michigan also offered to equip a range with every facility. No decision was reached.

It was decided that the ammunition for the next National Match be shipped to the place of the match and distributed, also that 20,000 of the same ammunition be sent to the States sending teams, to be used in team practice.

It was decided to establish an individual match to be known as the United States Individual Match. Conditions: slow fire at 200, 300, 500 and 600 yards; rapid fire at 200, 300 and 500 yards; skirmish fire, two runs.

A National pistol match was also provided for.

The protest made by Massachusetts against Hudson shooting on the New Jersey team last year was not allowed. It was decided that Hudson's conduct was unsportsmanlike but that there was, under the present rules, no recourse. The regulations were changed to meet future similar cases, so that no man who is either a principal or an alternate in this match, can shoot upon the team of another State for two years after his last appearance in the match.
